

I Get To

LISA & HARRISON

Married in Sedona · September 22, 2025

I'm inside the terminal,
Watching people pass.
Then you turn left and find me
On the other side of the glass.
There it is, that smile again,
And I'm right back at the start—
Our first date, that sudden spark,
Before I had the words for my heart.

Every time I see you,
That feeling comes back new.
The best part of my day is here:
I get to come get you.

*I get to laugh till I can't breathe,
Get to have you next to me.
Five hours feel like five minutes—
How do you do that every time?
I get to learn you as we go,
Watch the woman I love come home.
Of all the things I get to do,
I get to live this life with you.*

Morning coffee, nowhere else
I'd rather be than here.
You ask a simple question;
My answer takes a year.
There's rice and spinach ready—
Not exactly fine cuisine.
But I meant those wedding promises,
Even the part about the greens.

September twenty-second,
A year since our “I do.”
I thank God I get to stand here
And say it all again to you.

*I get to laugh till I can't breathe,
Get to have you next to me.
Five hours feel like five minutes—
How do you do that every time?
I get to learn you as we go,
Watch the woman I love come home.
Of all the things I get to do,
I get to live this life with you.*

When you've got something on your heart,
I want to hear you through.
Let me slow down, let me listen,
Make a little room for you.
I won't run out of questions;
There's so much left to know.
You're the one I want beside me
As we learn and as we grow.

*I get to laugh till I can't breathe,
Still get to have you next to me.
Five hours feel like five minutes—
And I still wish we had more time.
One year married, still beginning,
So much left for us to do.
Lisa, that's my answered prayer:
I get to live this life with you.*

*For all the days God gives us,
I'll keep choosing you.
And when you turn that corner,
I'll be there to come get you.*

